School Boards Shy Away From Prop. 6

By JOHN HORGAN

Public school boards in San Mateo County have been reluctant to become involved in the controversy surrounding Proposition 6, the proposed amendment which would allow boards to dismiss teachers who openly advocate homosexuality.

The initiative will be on the Nov. 7 ballot. If the measure is approved by the California electorate, it would directly affect the personnel practices of all public elementary, high school and unified districts in the state.

In this county, none of the boards of the 23 districts has taken a position on this sensitive subject. Few boards have even ventured to discuss it publicly. Many of those same trustees were eager to register their opinions about Proposition 13 before last June's election.

Now, however, silence has been the rule.

In interviews with the presidents of all 23 boards, The Times has attempted to find out why.

Their answers vary. Some say there is no reason to talk about it, that no one has brought the issue to their attention. Others say it is probably not within the province of a school board to take up such a question at all.

Still others disagree with that line of thinking and declare that a school board indeed should address the initiative, no matter how laden with emotion it might be.

"I don't want to discuss it at all," says George Petropoulos of the Brisbane School District board. "I have no reason to talk about it. I'd like to beg off."

"I won't discuss it," agrees Mildred Pleskach of the Bayshore School District board. "I haven't made up my mind on it, but I don't believe in taking rights away from people."

According to Chon Gutierrez of the Belmont School District board, "This can polarize the community. It's a subject best left without public comment. It would be opening up a can of worms. It's not a Belmont issue. I'm not sure how I will vote. I have some misgivings on both sides. I'm really torn on it."

"I don't expect that our board will take a stand on it," says Stephen Brown of the Hillsborough School District board. "It's never occurred to us. There has been no concern expressed in the community on it."

"It's not a proper issue for us to address," says Richard Dorst of the Sequoia Union High School District

Are CETA Funds Down the Drain?

Some Say Projects Badly Run

By TERRY DAVENPORT

Eddie C. Welbon's proposal for a youth employment center in Daly City was spelled out clearly on paper last fall when the City Council of Daly City gave him $15,000 in federal Comprehensive Employment and Training Act funds to run the center as a six-month experimental project.

The center had trouble fulfilling its agreement with Daly City. Nevertheless, both the city and San Mateo County extended its funding.

Now Welbon has submitted a grant application that requests $166,471 in CETA funds for a team of "environmental control officers," whose aim would be "to reduce litter and change littering habits" in Daly City.

This and other CETA project proposals are scheduled to be considered for funding by the county Board of Supervisors Oct. 24.

According to the application that Daly City's City Council approved for CETA funding last year, Welbon's center would serve "as an employment referral agency for 16-through 18-year-old Daly City youths."

Eddie C. Welbon, who heads the Daly City Community Multi-Purpose and Educational Service Center, is seeking funding for other projects in San Mateo County.

The city agreed to provide $15,000 for three salaries and also gave Welbon office space, office furniture and local telephone service under several conditions, including:

- That the center would submit monthly progress reports to the city.
- That the center would encourage employment only of youths aged 16 to 18 who reside in Daly City.
- That employees would observe normal check-in and check-out procedures when leaving work during business hours.
- That the center would provide a list of business references who could attest to the competence of its staff and officials.

Welbon's center, which he called the Daly City Community Multi-Purpose and Educational Service Center Inc. operated from March 7 through Sept. 7 of this year on the $15,000 grant.

In his evaluation of the center's six months of operation to the City Council and City Manager David Rowe on Sept. 11, Assistant City Manager Ray Letsinger reported, "The typical comment I heard from employers who were clients of the DCCM&ESCI was that the quality of young people referred was not generally as good as it might have been with better screening through interviews during the application phase . . .

"I would characterize the program overall as a success, however, the number of jobs generated for the amount of overhead and administrative cost seems low."

Specifically, Letsinger reported that the center had found jobs for 27 of the 28 youths it claimed to have placed. Since the program cost $15,000, that means each job placement cost the taxpayers $556. A youngster would have to work more than five 40-hour weeks at the minimum wage of $2.65 per hour to earn $556.

Of the 27 employed, Letsinger reported to the council, 15 quit or were fired after a brief time, one was terminated due to lack of work, two completed short-term projects and nine still were employed as of Sept. 18.

Welbon furnished this newspaper with a list of 321 applicants that he said he had on file. Of those, 73 are 13 to 15 years old and 70 are 19 to 31 years old. At least 84 have home phones outside of Daly City.

One "applicant" listed is Peter J. Markovich, who is 68 years old and has been manager of the Greater Daly City Chamber of Commerce for the past 25 years.

"I can't understand how my name ever got on that list. I have had nothing to do with them," Markovich said.

City Librarian Samuel Chandler called attention to other problems with the center following a closed administrative hearing July 19 at Benjamin Jurand's request. Jurand was appealing his firing by Welbon from his job at the center.

Chandler said the hearing demonstrated that "there ought to be more care in the selection of people who come to work for such an organization.

"While I realize that CETA is supposed to give relief to the unemployed, and I agree it should, there should be more care exercised. The government's money should be spent on people who have the potential to go out in the private sector."

Chandler said his feelings about the center were summed up best in his Aug. 4 memo to Rowe.

In that memo, Chandler wrote, "This hearing seems to indicate that the management of the Multi-Purpose and Educational Service Center is slipshod. . . . The testimony seems to indicate more care should be observed in handling funds.

"While it does not appear to me that the collecting of donations for employees has been illegal, the practice is close to being unethical and should be carefully reviewed. The lines of authority seem to be so slack, employees do not know who has the authority to hire and fire them and supervise their work."

Chandler also wrote that it was "appalling to hear of an employee (Clara Haynes) reporting to work and then going home to breakfast."

He said remodeling of the office did not justify requiring employees to work out of Mrs. Haynes' home and that employees leaving work should be required to leave notice of where they intended to be.

While he worked at the center, Jurand said, employees were asked to donate $100 per month and that the center's secretary was instructed to ask youths coming in to apply for work for donations, too.

Two youths who said they contributed are Robert Posey and Joe Espinoza, who both are 16 years old and live in Daly City.

Robert said he donated $5 to the center when he was asked for a contribution.

Joe said he was told his pay would be docked so the center could pay for supplies, and he later discovered that his paychecks for working on a weed-clearing project were about $5 short.

Assistant City Manager Letsinger said he and Rowe had access to the transcript of Jurand's hearing. Asked about the center's practice of requesting donations, Letsinger pointed out, "We investigated that and concluded that this practice occurs in many non-profit organizations."

Welbon furnished a list of donors to the city, but Letsinger said the city would not release that list without Welbon's approval. Welbon refused to give his consent.

Letsinger noted that Daly City had other problems with Welbon's center, namely:

- The center did not turn its monthly reports in on time. Letsinger said the city received only two reports, one after the first two months and one after the sixth and last month of the project. He said the reports were incomplete, causing the city to request additional data from the center.
- Welbon and Mrs. Haynes asked the city several times for supplies and a better office space than was specified in the agreement. Letsinger said the city has given the center "less than $300" in supplies and that the city attorney donated the center a duplicating machine from his private practice.
- That Welbon asked to be paid a salary himself, but the city refused after discovering that he did not live at the Daly City address he had given and thus was not eligible under CETA funding regulations.

CETA Proposals High in 'Points'

San Mateo County's Department of Community Services announced scores Friday of 39 proposals seeking portions of Daly City's funding under the Comprehensive oemployment and Training Act.

The amount of CETA funds available for 1978-79 has not been announced. Last year Daly City received $2 million in CETA monies, which are designed to help the "unemployable" gain experience that will enable them to qualify for jobs in the regular the work force.

Daly City's City Council handed out the money last year. This year the council decided to drop out of the business of administering CETA grants, leaving that task to the county.

There are two types of CETA proposals — those that seek money for specific public service projects and those that request funding for public service positions.

Of the nine proposals seeking funding in 1978-79, the top two earned scores of 76.41 and 73.91 out of a possible total of 100 points. Those proposals were made by Julius Castelan of Bay Area Regional Planning for two separate proposals for painting houses of the disadvantaged. Each proposal requests $178,000.

The proposal with the third highest score is for an anti-litter project costing $166,471 by Eddie C. Welbon of the Daly City Community Multi-Purpose and Educational Service Center Inc. It received a score of 70.16 points.

Of the 30 proposals seeking funding for CETA positions, those with the top three scores were made by the city of Daly City.

The top-scoring position proposal, requesting $10,382 for one job in the city manager's office, received a score of 85.18 out of a possible 90 points.

Next, with 74.26 points, is a $26,753 proposal for two positions in the city clerk's office.

The third-highest scoring position proposal asks $34,817 for three jobs in Daly City's personnel department. It received 74.23 points.

Walter Martone of the county Department of Community Services said the scores are subject to change until this Thursday, when final scores will be assigned at a meeting at 1:30 p.m. in the county office building at 590 Hamilton St., Redwood City.

The county Board of Supervisors will determine which proposals are funded at a meeting at 2:15 p.m. Oct. 24 in its meeting chamber at 401 Marshall St., Redwood City.

Welbon's Group Asks More Money

Clara Haynes of the Daly City Community Multi-Purpose and Educational Service Center asked Daly City's City Council Monday night for $1,020 to pay for the center's building rental cost for an office at 6794 Mission St. and for a second telephone.

Mrs. Haynes explained that the center, whose purpose is to find jobs for Daly City youths, has no budget for rental costs and desperately needs another telephone to handle all the calls it receives.

"We really need three phones but we're only asking the city for two," she said.

Councilman James Tucker noted the city recently gave the center $1,600 to keep it running until the county decides whether to continue its funding using federal Comprehensive Employment and Training Act monies. Tucker said that allocation included funds for a telephone.

Mrs. Haynes replied, "We aren't asking this for ourselves. We are serving the city's young people."

Mayor William Schumacher asked if Mrs. Haynes was aware that Daly City's Community Service Center also tries to find jobs for youths through its Job Corps program.

"We're really not aware of that," Mrs. Haynes said.

Conrad Pavellas of the Original Daly City Protective Association said he was aware that the council might think it odd that the center keeps requesting funds, but he pointed out that the council readily gave $30,000 to keep the Community Service Center functioning.

City Manager David Rowe said the center is entitled to use at least 5 1/2 percent of any CETA funds the county gives it on administrative costs.

He also clarified that other organizations have been paying rent without help from the city for office space at 6794 Mission St.

The council postponed action on Mrs. Haynes' request for funds, pending further word from the county on whether the center will continue to receive CETA funds.

Welbon settled for running the program at no pay. The $15,000 went to three staff workers.

Questioned about the center's performance, Mayor William Schumacher said Oct. 13 that he couldn't make a judgment because, "I don't have enough data about it."

Schumacher noted that Letsinger's evaluation of the program led him to believe that the center's job placements were not very encouraging.

The mayor said he was unaware that the center had requested donations from its employees and from youths applying for jobs. He commented that asking for donations from employees "should not be allowed" and that requesting donations from youths "would indicate mismanagement and, even more than that, it sounds illegal."

Schumacher said he wasn't aware of any severe problems with the center when the City Council voted in late September to extend the center's funding through Oct. 1. The $1,600 allocation came out of Daly City's general fund.

However, Schumacher confirmed that a group of youths he had hired through the center to clean up his back yard during the summer had

Agendas Don't Sell At Post-13 Prices

Daly City's new policy of charging citizens for copies of city meeting agendas, minutes and documents has reduced the demand for those papers — perhaps too much so, the City Council decided Monday night at a study session.

It has scheduled a full-scale discussion of the matter Oct. 23.

The council came up with the idea of charging $24 per year for council agendas, $36 per year for council minutes and up to 50 cents per page for other public records last July, soon after Proposition 13 went into effect, reducing city revenues from property taxes.

City Clerk Anna Ohlendorf explained that the charges cover the city's costs of preparing and mailing copies of the documents. For example, she said it costs about $1 per month in photocopying, paper and mailing costs for council agendas and another $1 per month in city staff time.

But she noted that charging for that service drastically cut the demand for the documents. Instead of mailing out 125 copies of the council agenda, Mrs. Ohlendorf said she now mails out just six copies each time and that she has had no requests from citizens for copies of council minutes.

She suggested cutting the fees for the agendas and minutes in half, a proposal that Mayor William Schumacher and Councilman Victor Kyriakis said they backed.

A Serramonte resident, Roseann Emerson, asked the council also to consider reducing charges for staff reports. The current fees now charged for them are 50 cents for the first page, 25 cents each for the next nine pages and 15 cents for each page thereafter. Previously, assembled staff reports cost citizens 15 cents per page.

Mrs. Emerson pointed out that the council had restored other services recently when it found some unexpected revenues. "You talk about an open door policy at City Hall, this isn't helping to encourage it," she said, adding that she personally has paid about $30 on city documents since the new policy was enacted.

The council is expected to discuss the subject Oct. 23.

D.C. Mulls Project's Traffic

Daly City's City Councilmen agree that the metal girders that have been rusting for 12 years at the intersection of Eastmoor and Sullivan Avenues have got to go.

They also agree that the commercial and residential structure proposed for the site by Le Jo., Inc., is a good idea.

But they can't decide whether approving a use permit for that building would result in too much traffic in an already congested area.

The council didn't come much closer to resolving that question at a study session Monday night after hearing a report by the city's staff on the amount of traffic that Le Jo's building is expected to generate.

City Manager David Rowe said the intersection carries a volume of 15,000 vehicles per day in both directions and that the new structure would add about 80 more vehicle trips daily.

A much greater problem, according to Rowe, is that access to and from the property would be extremely difficult. He said the staff proposed allowing only right turns from the driveway exit onto Sullivan Avenue.

Councilmen pointed out that restricting cars to a right turn would force more traffic around the corner to make a U-turn in the opposite direction.

After much discussion, the council failed to reach agreement and decided to take up the subject again Oct. 23.

Among the other topics the council will discuss Oct. 23 are:

- A use permit requested by Damavandi Enterprises, Inc., to allow the company to build 210 townhouse-style condominiums between Interstate 280 and Hampshire Avenue, north of Verducci Drive.
- A request of Citizens for Charter Improvements that the council endorse Proposition A, which proposes enactment of a revised county charter. A committee of 19 members spent the last year revising the charter.
- A request by the Mission Merchants that both the police chief and the fire chief have city cars at their disposal.
- A resolution determining that public interest requires the sale of a structure at 201 Templeton Ave., so that the city can use the land along with other property it already has bought for Lincoln Park.

board. "I haven't thought that much about it. It (homosexuality) hasn't been an issue in the six years that I've been on the board here."

Joseph Castelli of the San Mateo Union High School District board says, "This is for the public to decide. A board shouldn't get involved."

Presidents of a number of other county boards say they believe that trustees ought to take a stand on the matter.

"Absolutely," says Paul Licciardello of the San Carlos School District board. "We have a position of leadership in the community. This measure would affect the schools almost as much as Prop. 13."

"There may be a political price to pay if we bring it up," admits Dr. Rudie Tretten of the Laguna Salada Union School District board. "But maybe we should. I think maybe we ought to deal with it."

William Esselstein of the Las Lomitas School District board agrees. Says he, "I think it's appropriate for a board to discuss it. Passage would directly affect the schools."

Half the presidents say they are opposed to Prop. 6. All note they speak only as individuals, not as spokesmen for their boards.

"This is witch-hunting," says Margaret Zeigler of the Woodside School District board. "We already have the necessary mechanisms to deal with the problem."

"I feel the present laws are adequate," says Dorothy Adams of the Jefferson School District board. "This would be a can of worms. I will vote no."

Lois Lindley of the LaHonda-Pescadero Unified School District board says, "It's unnecessary legislation. I'm opposed to it."

"I think it's harmful," says Donald Hill of the San Mateo City School District board. "It raises a question that's almost certain to arouse suspicion. Anyone has the right to be treated as an individual."

"I'm definitely opposed," says Keith Breon of the Portola Valley School District board. "There is a serious constitutional question. Prop. 6 is not needed at all. I have no problem with the private conduct of an employee."

David Lohman of the Millbrae School District board says, "I don't see the need for it. Millbrae doesn't have a problem that Prop. 6 would address."

"We have enough laws already," says Nathaniel Brooks of the Ravenswood City School District board. "I'm not for anything that is divisive. We have enough controversy."

Pat Hilliard of the South San Francisco Unified School District board agrees: "We don't need something like this We don't need more laws."

Esselstein, Licciardello and Tretten all concur. They say they are opposed to Prop. 6 as well.

"To single out the homosexual is improper and unconstitutional," says Esselstein. "It's terrible and I'm opposed to it."

Says Licciardello, "We have sufficient laws on the books."

"It's an invasion of personal rights," adds Tretten, who says the issue of teacher misconduct is already handled adequately under present law.

Orrin Cross of the Redwood City School District board says he too is against the measure.

The only school board president who says he would vote for Prop. 6 is Christo Pallas of the San Bruno Park School District.

"I feel that having a known homosexual profess that in his classroom is not good for children," he says. "Kids can be influenced by their teachers. The children need our protection."

He says he is considering having the issue brought before his board before the election.

Ten board presidents say their minds are not made up on the subject or they say they would prefer to keep their views private.

"I know how I'm going to vote," says Anne Moser of the Menlo Park City School District board. "But I'm unprepared to be quoted."

Herman Fitzgerald of the Burlingame School District board says, "I haven't taken a stand. I have no comment. It's never been mentioned in our district."

"I have no position," says Virginia Centoni of the Cabrillo Unified School District board. "It's very sensitive. There is a lot of feeling about it."

James Roman of the Jefferson Union High School District board says, "I'm split on it as a voter. The measure has both good and bad parts. I'm not sure how I will vote on it. I don't think teachers should advocate their sexuality in the classroom. Still I don't see this as a major issue. If it passes, the board will implement it. We're really pawns."

The San Mateo Union High School District's Castelli says he needs more time to study the initiative.

Hillsborough's Brown says he hasn't made up his mind yet either.

In the San Mateo County Community College District, the administration there has told its trustees that Prop. 6 wouldn't apply to their district.

An attempt to have the board take a position on the issue several weeks ago died when the trustees made it clear that they don't believe it would be within their policy to do so.

stolen jewelry and personal items from his house.

Schumacher, a former policeman, said, "I never reported it to the police, because I didn't want to give them a bad name."

On Sept. 26, the San Mateo County Board of Supervisors extended funding of Welbon's center through Nov. 7. Walter Martone of the county's Department of Community Services explained that the project probably will be funded through March 1979, since its type of CETA funding guarantees salaried "slots" for 12 months.

Letsinger said Daly City did some checking before funding Welbon's project and learned that he had qualified in the past for grants from the state Department of Education.

Schumacher noted that the city didn't make it a practice to do extensive checking of persons who applied for CETA-funded programs.

"People involved in our community programs usually have been from the local area," he said. "We haven't had too many asking for funding who have come from out of town." He added that he didn't know Welbon well, but that Clara Haynes had been in Daly City for many years.

Derrald Etherly, director of the Mayor's Youth Service Office in San Francisco, has had more experience with Welbon. Etherly said several of Welbon's proposals seeking federal funding have come through his office in the last three years.

"Every time he submits a proposal, it's always a big stack of papers, it's always poorly written, its objectives are not clear and its budget is out of order," Etherly remarked.

In early June, Welbon received tentative approval from the Mayor's Office of Employment and Training in San Francisco for a six-week youth employment project in that city to be funded by CETA.

He submitted the proposal on behalf of the Baptist Ministers Council and the Western Addition Homeowners and Residents Council, two San Francisco-based organizations to which he belongs.

Welbon's link to the ministers group is as pastor of the Westside Community Church of San Francisco.

On June 26, Welbon asked to be named director of the youth employment project, at a salary of $215 per week for eight weeks. He asked that six other ministers and two clerks be employed as staff at salaries of $200 per week and up.

Mayor George Moscone informed Welbon on June 27 that the agreement between Welbon's organizations and the City of San Francisco was cancelled and that the mayor's office would run it instead.

San Francisco City Attorney George Agnost explained that the CETA regulations governing the funding forbid the hiring of program sponsorship because they would have influence over the administration of the program. He said the ministers also neglected to provide proof that the youths would be working on non-religious projects.

At a July 18 press conference, Welbon charged that Moscone had broken his promise to give disadvantaged youths summer jobs. On July 24, he filed a formal grievance with the U.S. Department of Labor. The grievance remains under investigation.

On Aug. 22, San Mateo County denied Welbon's request for $244,000 to run a youth employment training project. The contract was awarded to the county Office of Education instead.

Welbon has other projects planned. He said he has applied to the state Department of Education for funding of a nutrition program in Daly City child care centers, that he wants to begin a vandalism reduction program with Daly City's two school districts and that he would like to expand the Daly City youth employment program.

Welbon's latest proposal was made Sept. 29 to San Mateo County. That's the one which, under sponsorship of the Daly City Community Multi-Purpose and Educational Service Center, requests $166,471 in Daly City's CETA funds for the anti-litter project.

Last year, Daly City was awarded $2 million in CETA funds by the federal government. Since this year's allocation hasn't yet been announced, San Mateo County has been ranking CETA proposals under a point system. Those with the greatest number of points can expect to be funded.

Last Friday, Welbon learned that his anti-litter project received one of the highest scores among the 39 proposals vying for the CETA funds.

The county Board of Supervisors is scheduled to determine which CETA proposals will be funded Oct. 24.

Carter, Brown Greet Sister County Visitors From Italy

By HEIDI VAN ZANT

A little bit of history has been made in the last two weeks with the visit by a delegation of Italians to San Mateo County.

This group of 167 from Lucca, Italy, is the first to visit the United States as part of a sister-county program — a first for Italy, a first for the U.S.

To mark the occasion, President Carter's personal secretary last week phoned one of the American organizers of the tour and conveyed the president's welcome.

Gov. Jerry Brown and U.S. Sen. Alan Cranston also have passed along their greetings and best wishes.

Since they arrived Oct. 4, the delegation has been wined and dined up and down the state. The pace they have kept is remarkably quick.

They have visited Reno, Lake Tahoe, Disneyland, Sacramento, Merced, the Redwood Empire and Tijuana, Mexico.

Monday the visitors attended a special South San Francisco City Council meeting held in their honor, were guests at a luncheon, toured city facilities and were honored at a banquet.

During the day there was time for several kinds of exchanges — of gifts, conversation and a comparison of political systems.

Lucca, Italy is a province and a city. About 400,000 persons live in the province and 77,000 live in the city.

The delegation includes representatives of the province and of the City of Lucca.

The sister-county relationship Lucca has with San Mateo County is the first of its kind for the United States and the first Italy has had with a country in the Free World, according to Dan Casentini.

Casentini is a North County resident who has been appointed by the Board of Supervisors as its ambassador to Italy. The civil service commissioner recently visited Italy to finalize plans for the historic trip.

Lucca also has a sister-city relationship with South San Francisco, which is why Monday was devoted to learning about its inner workings.

Each city department head reviewed departmental responsibilities and compared notes with counterparts from Italy.

Because most of the visitors do not speak English, an interpreter was used. However, several of the city representatives know Italian and could converse with them.

The customary exchange of presents at the South San Francisco City Hall resembled Christmas morning.

Delegates from Italy were given apples, wine and champagne, calendars, pen sets and two small stuffed animals. The gifts were donations from businessmen given by the city.

In return, local officials were given leather book bags and silver emblems.

Between the meeting with city representatives and a tour of the libraries and sewage treatment plant, several delegates offered their impressions of California and the United States.

"We have seen very positive things," said one delegate. "People work very hard for their money."

The delegation did not know quite what to make of some of the fun spots — Disneyland and the gambling casinos.

"We noticed how crazy the American can be — how they can throw away their money," said a chuckling Italian of his visit to Tahoe and Reno.

THE DIET CORNER

By ELISE GENDAR

The best part of you remains after weight loss.

Every once in a while, a dieter worries that along with pounds something special will be shed. A nice part of the person. Maybe even the part that others like best.

Put that worry behind you. The best part remains, I promise. How do I know? Because that is the caring part, the part that cared enough to do the very best for the rest of you.

It is the part that learned to measure, cook, and serve nutritiously — balanced meals not only for yourself but also for the rest of the family. Now that is a very important part of you, that caring part.

It's a sharing part as well. You've shared your new knowledge with the people closest to you. Maybe they haven't even been aware of it. But there has been a subtle difference in the way you shop, for instance. Many of the old junk food items no longer find their way home to bother your husband and children. And that's all to the good.

And the part that remains is much more attractive. There's no incentive like weight loss to foster a desire to spruce up. You're lovelier to be near. I'll bet people who haven't remarked on your appearance in years are noticing and approving.

What was lost wasn't you.

What you lost was excess, and excesses are never good.

So stop worrying and take a bow. The best part of you looks back at you from the mirror every day. And as a special reward, a new recipe that disguises its diet purpose in a luxurious taste.

QUICK QUICHE

8 slices diet sliced white bread, crusts removed and saved
2 eggs
¼ cup mushroom slices
2 tablespoons fresh minced onions
6 ounces muenster cheese
1 cup skim milk

Spray 8-inch pan with vegetable spray and fit bread to cover bottom. In blender combine eggs, milk, onion, cheese and bread crusts. Blend until smooth. Arrange mushrooms over bread and pour egg mixture evenly. Bake at 370 degrees for 35 minutes.

And keep watching The Diet Corner for weekly recipes that will show you that common sense eating on a diet is truly delicious.

NELL NORTON

Good morning, good cooks.

Do you look for short ribs among that array of beef cuts when you want to treat your family to a change-of-pace, satisfying meal? The meat on these ribs is especially flavorful, as often seems true of the meat next to the bone, and a thin layer of fat between layers provides juiciness.

Southwestern short ribs can claim even more flavor development, for after the ribs are braised until tender, they're coated with a spicy brush-on sauce and broiled to perfection.

Both braising and broiling can be done on the outdoor grill, says the National Livestock and Meat Board.

SOUTHWESTERN SHORT RIBS

4 pounds beef short ribs, cut into pieces
1 can (8 ounces) tomato sauce
¼ cup water
1 tablespoon honey
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon chili powder
A dash of hot sauce
⅛ teaspoon coriander

Place short ribs in a large skillet or Dutch oven. Cover tightly and bake in a moderate oven (350-degrees) for 2 hours or until ribs are tender, turning after first hour.

Combine one can tomato sauce, fourth-cup water, one tablespoon honey, one teaspoon salt, one teaspoon chili powder, a dash of hot sauce and one-eighth teaspoon coriander in saucepan and cook slowly for 15 minutes, stirring occasionally. Place ribs on rack in broiler pan or on an outdoor grill so surfave of meat is 3 to 5 inches from the heat. Brush with sauce.

Broil 10 to 15 minutes, turning and brushing with sauce occasionally.

Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Ram-blings

By STEVE KAUFMAN
Commissoner of Publicity

As has been the case in previous years, many of Westmoor High School's clubs and individuals have wasted no time in launching their personal projects. As a result, Westmoor is becoming a very busy place.

First off, I would like to wish the school principal, Clayton Kollmann, a speedy recovery. He is having back problems, and this interferes with his administrative duties. I hope that the situation is quickly taken care of and he returns to Westmoor in good health.

One of the most important publications of the year, the Rambler, takes a tremendous amount of time and effort to construct. This yearbook has improved steadily over the years, and it once again looks as though Westmoor will turn out yet another excellent book.

Under the intense guidance of editor Angela Rizzo, the large staff already has begun work, deciding how the pages should be arranged. Angela has called numerous meetings and has spent a tremendous amount of her personal time making arrangements and orienting the new staff about the proceedings. I would personally like to thank her for this. Keep up the good work.

The school paper, the Rampage, published its first issue of the new year last Friday. The small yet skilled staff has done a great job, producing a six-page paper, which is seldom done at Westmoor. Editor Buzz Locke has four years of journalism training behind him and is doing an outstanding job. Congratulations for a nice piece of work.

The junior class has been busy as well, selling Westmoor Bumper Stickers to students at school. One can always see President Rachelle Fernandez with an armful of them and telling all of the kids she passes "Want to buy one?" Keep up the good salesmanship. Also, the class is sponsoring a car wash Nov. 4 at the St. Francis Mobil gas station at the corner of Southgate and St. Francis. It will be between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. The cost is $1 per car.

Westmoor's Drama Department is preparing for yet another outstanding performance this fall. A majority of these actors and actresses are in the Drama Club, which recently had its first meeting. Under the guidance of Director Ken Brown, these fine performers will do a great job. Break a leg!

I would like to take this opportunity to inform all freshmen, sophomores and juniors about the Senior Bench. This special seat bears the plaques of some of Westmoor's graduating classes. Enraged at the number of non-seniors occupying this prized space, a group of these graduating seniors decided to form a Senior Patrol. These dedicated watchpeople wear a green armband bearing the initials SP. Here's how the system works:

An unsuspecting student sits down on the bench. Once a patrolperson determines that the individualisn't a senior, a loud hand-held foghorn is sounded. This poor student is surrounded quickly by patrolpeople and a few of Westmoor's varsity football players. The suspect then has to pay a penalty — mainly to clean one of the plates on the bench.

It is all meant in complete fun and the seniors enjoyed planning. Interestingly enough, this used to be a custom in Westmoor during its earlier days, but eventually died out. Thus, an old tradition has been brought back to life. Have fun!

The Westmoor chapter of the California Scholarship Federation had its first meeting last week and elected officers. The winners were: President Babbie Freiberg, Vice-President Mitzi Bipes, and Secretary Linda Rogers. The group also decided to visit Stanford University for its annual college trip.

Westmoor had its first rally of the school year last Friday, and in my opinion, it was one of the best and most spirited rallies I've ever seen. The spirit displayed caught everyone by surprise and it seemed as though everyone had a good time. Congratulations to Mike Montes, the rally commissioner, for doing a fine job arranging this fun event.

The Auto Safety Club, Hermanos Latinos, and the Kennel Club also had meetings. Good luck for a good year of activities. Also, the Hermanos Latinos Club is selling candy to raise money for its organization. Not only is it delicious, but is for an excellent cause. Hope they raise much.

SPORTS. Westmoor's varsity football team is doing a great job after winning its season opener against Half Moon Bay, 28-0. Westmoor, under the expert direction of Quarterback Tony Limutau, scored a touchdown in every quarter, with Tony completing 11 of 18 passes for 176 yards. He also rushed 64 yards in 14 carries. Other standouts in the game were Maurice Lowe (three touchdowns) and Todd Silva (one touchdown), Ken Baptista, Rolph Apostolos, Robert Pittman, and Steve Botta.

Good luck to Westmoor's bowling league. This dedicated team always can be seen leaving on a big yellow bus for practice at Westlake Bowl. Have a good season!

IN LAST week's column we talked some about the effects and Westmoor student reactions to the recent teachers' strike, including some pros and cons about the quality of the substitute teachers while the regulars were walking the picket lines. We didn't have room last week for all the reaction we gathered, so here's the rest.

Sally McMillian is a senior and she thought very highly of the substitutes filling in. "They did a really good job considering the situation," she commented. "They kept us in class and we did learn things. Only one of my classes was a waste of time, but my regular teacher came back and we got back to work.

"As for the students, they were much calmer compared to other schools. They had much more radical attitudes than Westmoor students had. Of course the strike made things difficult, but we overcame that handicap."

WHERE does this leave Westmoor now? Things will be a little uneasy for awhile. There were some bad feelings among those who did and didn't honor the picket lines. Although they aren't discussed much, they do exist. Only time will solve that. But everyone — students, faculty and administration — is breathing a sigh of relief now that the strike is past.

During the Friday of the third week of the strike, students received a nice surprise. In a gesture of understanding and compassion on the part of the administration of Westmoor, sixth period was interrupted at 12:50 p.m. by a bell. Teachers then immediately read a special bulletin thanking the students for their patience and cooperation during the strike. They realized how hard it was for everyone. Said Principal Clayton Kollmann, "It was the proper thing to do. We all deserved it."

If it hasn't been said, I will say it now. I feel that this was one of the nicest things I've ever seen done at Westmoor in my four years there. I personally would like to thank the administration for its kindness and understanding.

I would like to congratulate and wish luck to Angela Rizzo, the current student body president. She also has the responsibility of being the yearbook editor of the school year and has been working hard on this project. She already has called several meetings of the huge staff this year to organize and plan this important publication. Keep up the good work!

BEST OF luck to the Drama Club this year. It had a meeting and discussed which play it would like to put on for the fall semester. If this one is half as good as the previous performances, Westmoor's Drama Department should have an outstanding season.

Westmoor's newspaper, the Rampage, is due for publication in a few short days. Under the direction of Editor Buzz Locke, the small yet talented staff of the paper is working hard to produce the issues. Best of luck this year.

Get-well wishes should be extended to Principal Clayton Kollmann. His back was acting up and he had to leave school early to take care of it. Hope it heals soon.

Congratulations to the freshman cross-country team, which placed second at the Sunnyvale Invitationals. These runners brought home the first team trophy. The athletes were Steve Chiechi, Guy Pipili, Mark Taddei, Jim Carroll, Al Rivas and Jim Simons. Great work!

Serramonte High School's first Parent-Teacher-Student Association (P.T.S.A.) meeting was Oct. 12. The P.T.S.A. helps support our many student activities.

Other P.T.S.A. officers include: Historians, Curtis Dennison and Robert Smith; membership, Mrs. Ione Lara and Mrs. Pat Perruquet; and publicity, Genny Hom and Mrs. Joan Dennison.

Support Serramonte by joining the P.T.S.A.

Journalism is back at Serramonte. This year Serramonte High has a new journalism class. In the past, there was a journalism class every year which put our school newspaper together, but during the last two years, students lost interest in journalism and the class was discontinued. The advisor, John Harley, has started the class again. The class is small but most of the students are working very hard. The class already has put out the first edition of the Serramonte Crown.

Other students on the journalism staff are: artists, Raul Gonzales and Audrey Johnson; cartoonist, Bob Crane; photographers, Myrna Galindez, Veronica Herrera and Ty Cheng; editorial reporter, Alicia Gammara; news reporters, Willie Mendoza, Jackie Bonney, Rene Contreras; feature reporters, Kathy Williams, Lani Pitolo, Frances Clayborn, Sara Mejia, Myrna Galindez; sports reporter, Pete Rozaikis; and advertising, Arnette Terry, Yvonne Moses and Frances Clayborn.

If you have any news or special ideas you would like to see in the next issue of The Crown, bring them to the journalism class in room 104.

Serramonte's College Night will be Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at Westmoor High School. College Night is a popular program put on every year to give parents and students information on the various colleges and universities. Representatives will answer any questions students have about college. The representatives also will discuss academic entrance requirements, school costs, financial aid, and scholarships. All students and parents are welcome.

Serramonte's first assembly will be Thursday. Jeffrey Hanson, otherwise known as "Mr. Escape," will perform.

Surviving UN Ups and Downs

Perspective

By ARVILLE FINACOM

The flags snap smartly in the spring breeze. Brazil's star-studded globe on green stands out prophetically. The red, white and blue of the British Union Jack, French Tricolor and United States Stars and Stripes seems everywhere. Passersby puzzle over unfamiliar X's, stripes, crosses and national symbols.

The scene is in front of the War Memorial Opera House on Van Ness Avenue in San Francisco. The time — spring, 1945. The event — a convocation of representatives from 50 soverign states representing 80 per cent of the world's population, calling themselves informally the "united nations," and meeting in assembly to hammer out details of a charter designed to "save succeeding generations from the scourge of war . . ." by developing "friendly relations among nations," achieving "international cooperation in solving international problems of an economic, social, cultural or humanitarian character," and by becoming "a center for harmonizing the actions of nations in the attainment of these common ends."

In the 33 years since the charter's effective date, oct. 24, 1945, when a majority of the nations involved ratified it in their home assemblies, much as happened in the United Nations.

Most consequently, the number of members in its general assembly has more than doubled, shifting voting power away from the "developed" countries. The Security Council, made up initially of the five nations fighting fascism in World War II — Nationalist China, England, France, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United States — now includes Communist rather than nationalist China and often deadlocks on decisions due to the ideological and political polarity between democracy and Communism.

It doesn't take much political astuteness to realize that as a stablizing force the UN is less than effective and many citizens resent U.S. involvement in the organization. Presssure groups surface from time to time demanding that the U.S. withdraw its membership. I found it interesting to see a number of roadside signs this summer in rural parts of the West and Midwest all saying, "Get US out of the UN now."

UNICEF, the United Nation's International Children's Emergency Fund, is perhaps the bet-know UN agency. Begun in 1946 as a stop-gap committee to aid the millions of homeless and destitute children wandering in China and 14 European countries ravaged by World War II, by 1949 nearly six million children in Europe alone were receiving supplemental food, medical and clothing assistance.

In 1950, the committee became permanent and the words "international" and "emergency" were dropped althought he letters were left in the acronym to keep it easily pronounceable. In the years since, UNICEF has concentrated not only on helping children directly but also on improving nutrition and sanitation within entire communities so that everyone, including the children, will have a better chance for continued survival.

October became official UNICEF month soon after the committee became permanent.

In those early days of the United Nations, much in-school teaching about the UN was built around its children's services. A Sunday school class in Pennsylvania discussing, in 1950, the UN's birth some five years before, settled on a novel way to raise funds for the organization. Instead of asking for a "treat" as they went door-to-door on Halloween, they asked for pennies for UNICEF. The class collected $17, and "Trick or Treat for UNICE" was born.

In the 28 years since, over $50 million has been raised to aid the neediest children in the world. In 1967, by presidential proclamation, Oct. 31 became National UNICEF Day, on which individuals, church groups, youth clubs and school related organizations sponsor activities.

As neighborhood trick-or-treat waned in recent years, groups sponsoring UNICEF Day collections took to soliciting in shopping centes, sponsoring events where proceeds go to UNICEF, conducting "thons" of many varieties and offering informative programs where the price of admission is a free-will donation to UNICEF.

Some individuals "match" gifts. Every time they give a "treat," they add a coin to a UNICEF box, explaining carefully to the child at the door the purpose for their action.

UNICEF maintains exceptionally low administrative costs and is able to provide children's services at a fraction of what the average person in a "developed" country pays. Consider: A penny buys a sterile gauze pad to cover a child's sore or wound. Eight cents provides penicillin to cure a child's infection.

B of A Hikes Scholarships

Bank of America is increasing the cash awards it presents annually to outstanding California high school seniors and community college students under its Achievement Awards and Community College Awards programs.

The bank has announced that this year's top winners in the Achievement Awards competition will receive $2,000 each, second-place winners $1,000, third-place $750, and runner-up $500. Previously, winning students received $1,000, $750, $500 and $250 respectively.

Cash scholarships in the Community College Awards program will be increased to $2,500 for first place, $1,500 for second, $1,000 for third and $500 for runner-up. Previously, these awards were $2,000, $1,000, $500 and $250 respectively.

"The rising costs of attending college have made it more difficult for California students to finance their higher education," said Lee Gomez, the bank's school awards officer. "By increasing these cash awards, Bank of America hopes to assist and encourage students to pursue college degrees despite increased expenses."

Under the annual statewide programs, the bank presents 10 sets of first, second, third and runners-up prizes to high school winners and two sets of awards to community college winners.

More than 300,000 graduating seniors from virtually every California high school are eligible to compete each year in the Achievement Awards program. Since the program began in 1948, the bank has awarded more than $3 million to outstanding seniors.

About 160,000 second-year students are involved annually in the Community College Awards program.

The programs begin in September and culminate in final events held in May and June in 12 areas of the state. Winners are selected by teachers and panels of judges from communities at large. Awards are made not only on scholastic achievement but also on demonstrated leadership, sense of responsibility and promise of future success and service to society.

Disability Awareness Week

Invisible Disabilities in Spotlight

Webster defines disability as "that which disables, as an illness or injury; a legal disqualification or incapacity; something that restricts; a limitation; disadvantage."

The people at the state Department of Rehabilitation are out to change if not the definition, at least the way people view the disabilities of others.

This week, Oct. 14-21, has been proclaimed "Disability Awareness Week" and special educational forums will be presented throughout the state focusing on the provisions of the Vocational Rehabilitation Act. Last year, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Joseph Califano signed 504 regulations implementing portions of the act.

The regulations prohibit discrimination toward job applicants on the basis of physical or mental disability and require affirmative action programs similar to those now in force for minority and women applicants for any company doing substantial business with the federal government.

The Department of Rehabilitation specializes in job training, counseling and placement of handicapped individuals. There are four offices in San Mateo County headed up by district director Marjorie Karter, who works out of the Redwood City headquarters of the department.

The purpose of Disability Awareness Week is to focus attention on all disabled persons, but Ms. Karter says they hope to emphasize what she terms "the invisible disabilities."

Until now, most rehabilitation programs have been geared to those whose disabilities are visible, she explained. "Our awareness has been focused on those in wheelchairs, the deaf, the blind, those with obvious handicaps."

However, she pointed out, severe emotional problems or medical problems such as diabetes, cardiac problems, hypertension or allergies can be just as disabling. "Many times these problems can impact a person's life," Ms. Karter explained. "if a problem interferes with a person's ability to function on the job, he is in fact, disabled."

The Department of Rehabilitation works with both the permanently impaired and those who have recovered from temporary setbacks such as injuries, long illnesses or psychiatric problems. Counselors deal with clients on a one-to-one basis. The ultimate goal to put the client back to work.

"Realistically, the agency's goal is to put people back to work," explained Linda Kurtz, district resource specialist for the department. "But in some cases this could mean a long training period, a part-time job, a sheltered workshop or a specialized environment."

The 20 counselors working in San Mateo County include specialists in alcoholism, blindness, developmental disabilities, deafness and workman's compensation to aid those suffering industrial injuries.

The department is funded by the federal government and from state funds. It operates under federal guidelines geared to bringing the handicapped back into the work market.

Their services range from evaluation of a client's mental and physical health to sophisticated job interest and aptitude testing.

This is followed by training in various fields until a client is considered "job ready." Anyone sent by the department to a prospective employer is considered to be ready to return to work "with reasonable accommodation," according to Ms. Kurtz.

That "reasonable accommodation" may be something as simple as a special stool for someone with a back injury to ramps for those in wheelchairs or specialized equipment that enable handicapped workers to perform skilled tasks.

Hiring a disabled person may also require some "job restructuring" on the part of the employer, said Ms. Kurtz. "Job restructuring goes on all the time on an informal basis," she explained.

"Maybe one person in an office enjoys typing, so he will do more of it, while another one is good at detail work, so most of that type of work will be done by that person. Now the law ia asking the employer to do it on a formal basis."

Job restructuring may involve the reassigning of incidental duties so that disabled people are not required to do heavy lifting or getting supplies that they can't reach, for example.

The state has started a program of its own, examining the requirements for all entry level jobs in each state department to make sure the requirements are all job related. Each department also has an affirmative action officer and an advisory committee made up of disabled individuals.

The rehabilitation department specializes in instructing the disabled in job-seeking skills, including resume writing and interview techniques.

"For example," said Ms. Karter, "we teach our clients to stress their strengths. We teach them to look at themselves in terms of their skills rather than in terms of a label."

The department works closely with private rehabilitation agencies in the county such as Easter Seals, Poplar Center and the county Vocational Rehabilitation Service.

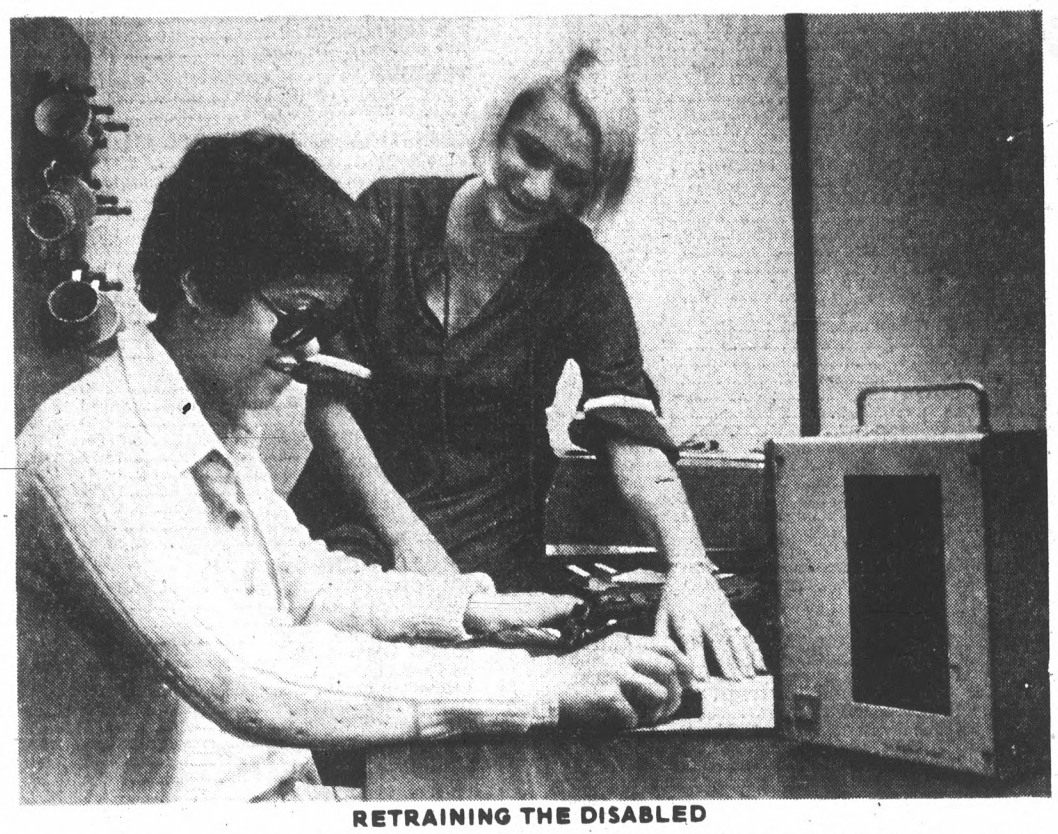
"They are the fingers that make the hand effective," said Ms. Karter.

The deparment utilizes the services of these private agencies for on-the-job training, workshop experience, work adjustment periods and other services.

"We are careful not to duplicate services but we help each other out and maintain good relationships with all the private agencies," she said.

In connection with Disability Awareness Week, the department will present "A New Approach," a Norman Lear film dealing with employment of the handicapped, at 9:30 a.m. Monday at the Black Angus Restaurant, 477 9th Ave., San Mateo. Members of the staff will be on hand to discuss department services.

On Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week, an "Action Equalization Conference" will be held at Rickey's Hyatt House in Palo Alto. The purpose of the conference will be to discuss "integration of the disabled into society, equal access to competitive employment, social services delivery systems and communication among the disabled themselves."



RETRAINING THE DISABLED

Sandy Kolterman, a counselor with the Department of Rehabilitation, supervises her client, Jane Harris, on the use of the opticon machine, a device enabling blind people to "read." Devices like these are putting disabled back into the job market. Retraining of the disabled is one of the services offered by the Department of Rehabilitation which is observing Disability Awareness Week Oct. 14-21.

Gloria Anderson

Ministering To the Deaf

When the Rev. James H. Corson climbs to the pastorial podium Nov. 5, Gloria Anderson will be paying particularly close attention to his sermon.

In fact, she won't miss a word.

She will be interpreting the sermon in sign language to the deaf, as the Burlingame United Methodist Church launches a new ministry.

It will make it the third Peninsula church, and only the second known in San Mateo County, to interpret sermons for deaf mutes.

Two of those in attendance will be Mrs. Anderson's parents, each of whom was rendered deaf after birth because of illnesses.

The church believes that there are about 50 deaf people living in cities between Palo Alto and San Francisco.

Most of the Bay Area's deaf mutes live in the East Bay because of the proximity of several services for the deaf, including schools.

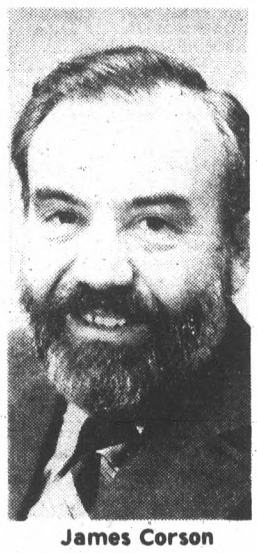
There are seven mutes in Burlingame, Mrs. Anderson said.

The ministry was inspired by the church's social concerns commission, according to Corson.

"Their major assignment is to be sensitive to what is going on in the world and how the gospel and church can relate to it," Corson said.

Does deafness make the person more or less susceptible to the gospel?

"From my own experience, it makes them less susceptible because they don't have the exposure that most people have to religion," said Mrs. Anderson.



James Corson

She is a registered, freelance interpretator for the deaf.

"Most of us can go around the corner and attend any of four churches, but a deaf person feels inhibited and is concerned about acceptance.

"With an interpretator, they feel that they can at least relate, because they can communicate with the minister . . ."

Lip reading of sermons is exhaustive, thus often discouraging to deaf persons.

Mrs. Anderson will stand in an area so as not to distract the persons listening to the sermon. She will interpret the choir's selections as well as Corson's sermons.

"I feel very strongly that we have to find creative ways of opening the whole life of the church so that it is possible for the deaf to participate in the fellowship hour and other activities," Corson asserted.

"We want the people to be identified with the church's whole experience — not just Sunday. I don't know how we're going to do that, but we're going to try."

She Wants to Provide a Center for County's Disabled—With a SMILE

By KAREN PETTERSON

Johanna Wallace is legally blind.

But that handicap hasn't stopped her from earning a master's degree in rehabilitation counseling, running a family and organizing child care co-ops, women's groups and community programs.

She now has taken on a new and ambitious project, one that she calls "the ultimate in grass roots organizing."

The eventual goal is the establishment of an "independent living center" which would offer comprehensive services to the disabled in San Mateo County. The official name of the project is the San Mateo Independent Living Experience, or SMILE.

It would be a centrally located clearinghouse of services for the disabled "so they don't have to go to a different agency and fill out a different form every time they need something," Mrs. Wallace explained.

"The center is unique in that the disabled start it, run it and staff it — with a little help from their friends in the community," she said.

The idea for the center was born last May when Mrs. Wallace did a "needs assessment study" for the disabled in San Mateo County as part of a volunteer project for the Jewish Community Center in Belmont.

What she discovered, as a result of the survey, was that "there is no place in this county for the disabled to go."

Other than the Department of Rehabilitation, she explained, which concentrates on putting disabled people back into the job market, most of the private agencies deal with mentally retarded and developmentally disabled persons.

The emphasis of SMILE, she said, will be on the physically disabled, "although we may serve the mildly retarded."

Mrs. Wallace drew up a proposal outlining the services to be offered by the center and said she has received a great deal of support from other agencies in the community specializing in aid to the disabled.

"We found we were not duplicating services, because there aren't enough services to duplicate," she said.

"The biggest problem we have right now is that the disabled in this county are simply invisible. Non-official figures estimate that there are 186,000 disabled in San Mateo County between the ages of 16 and 64," said Mrs. Wallace. "And that doesn't count children or senior citizens. Most of them are home, dependent on their families, or holed up somewhere collecting Social Security with no place to go," she said.

With help from the contacts she had made when doing the original survey and referrals from private agencies, Mrs. Wallace has assembled a group of "dynamic and dedicated" disabled people who meet every Tuesday night at the Fair Oaks Community Center in Redwood City to map out plans to make SMILE a reality.

The group has launched what it terms a "mini master plan" campaign aimed at gathering funds and community support to implement the immediate goals — finding an accessible location, establishing an information and referral office and starting a wheelchair repair service.

"These things can easily be done from a storefront location," Mrs. Wallace explained, "and they will enable us to be ready to expand when the big money comes in."

The long-range plans call for establishment of an information and referral service to assist with attendant referrals (attendants are those people who help a disabled person do what he is unable to do for himself) and referrals to accessible housing; an advocacy program to include paralegal services, community education on the needs, problems and rights of the disabled and financial counseling; a peer counseling program; a "job factory" to instruct the disabled in job-seeking skills and job search; and expansion of the wheelchair repair shop.

The latter is an important element in the plan, explains Mrs. Wallace, "because there really is no place in the county that can provide reliable wheelchair repair and people here are forced to go to Berkeley or San Francisco. It's also a self-supporting service," she said.

Mrs. Wallace said the group will apply for a Department of Rehabilitation grant next year, but in the meantime she is putting together an advisory council of professional people to assist with the project and a board of directors whose primary function will be fund raising.

"We will also be going to community groups to request help with donations or fund-raising events," she said.

Two anonymous donors have given the center gifts of $100 each, and that is what the group has been operating with until now.

Anyone interested in participating in the project can contact Mrs. Wallace at the Senior Adults Legal Assistance office in Palo Alto.

Private Eye Natural for Whodunit

By HEIDI VAN ZANT

It makes sense that a private eye would write a book about being a private eye.

At least it did to San Bruno resident G.P. Kennealy, whose book, "Nobody Wins," has just been released in the Bay Area.

Although he describes his own job as being "mostly cut and dried stuff," he adds that the book glamorizes the job of a private investigator.

The book is about the theft of 125 pounds of morphine by amateur thieves at San Francisco International Airport.

Kennealy said the novel is an exaggeration of several cases he has been involved in.

"Nobody Wins" was written, the 40-year-old Kennealy said, because "I've read a lot and thought, 'any dummy could do this.'"

The only problem he had with writing his book was overcoming the feeling that his work was laughable.

"It looks so silly when you see it on paper," he said, adding that now when he reads the book through he is pleased with his writing.

He received a $1,500 advance for his book and will receive 6 percent of the sales.

This is his first book to be published and the second one he has written.

It took him one year to write the book in his spare time and three weeks for his literary agent to find a publisher.

When asked what his market is, Kennealy jokes: "Anybody with $1.75."

On a more serious note, he said the book should appeal to book browsers who like mysteries.

The book has been distributed to Bay Area book stores, drug stores and markets.

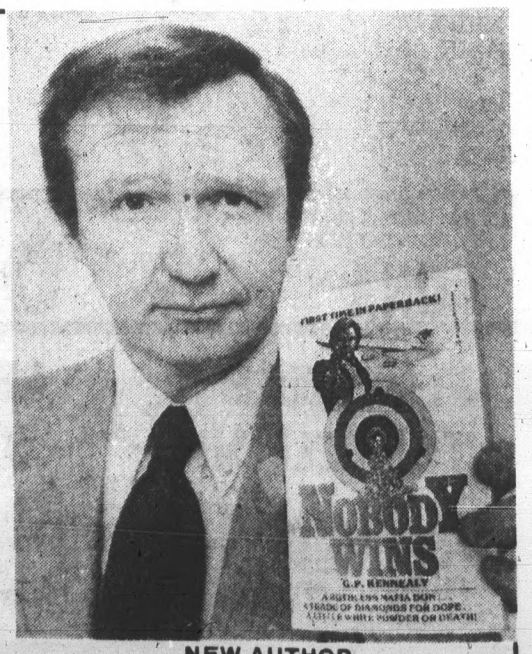
"It's kind of exciting. It's a big thrill to see your name," he said.

Kennealy admitted that when he has passed a store where his book is sold, he has moved "Nobody Wins" to the rack that is marked "Bestsellers."

The author said he does not know how well sales are going but he is just satisfied that a publisher was interested.

"Once you get a publisher, you're in such good shape," he said, adding that he is almost finished with another book.

He said he would "love" to become well known because of his writing. "It's fun to think about it," he added.



NEW AUTHOR

G. P. Kennealy is pleased with his first book.

Do We Want to Deprive San Mateo of New Jobs, New Tax Revenues, and New Shopping Choice?

Dear Fellow San Matean:

Our city has a rare opportunity to broaden the local tax base, strengthen the city economy, and bring more shopping choice to you as a consumer.

It will take your "NO" vote on Proposition D to make it happen.

A NO vote will keep the city's option to have a new shopping center at Mariner's Island.

That shopping center will produce 2,400 new permanent jobs, 650 construction jobs, annual employment payroll of $24 million, and at least $800,000 a year in new tax monies for our city.

The center itself will have high-quality stores, unique recreational and community facilities, and will have to meet the strictest environmental standards.

And all these benefits will be achieved without adding one cent of tax burden on San Mateo property owners and renters.

The Mariner's Island center will be an economic stimulus to the entire city, including the downtown. That's why our committee includes downtown merchants and property owners as well as a broad cross-section of other San Mateo residents.

If we all ask ourselves, "Do we want to deprive San Mateo of the best chance it has had in a generation to strengthen the city economy with a high-quality project?" the answer certainly has to be NO.

Samuel Chandler

"Superwoman" is a book about housework. It's more than that. It's a book that may reshape the whole future of that blessed creature, the housewife.

Look at what the author says to that lovely creature among the pots and pans. "You are the one and only star of your own life . . . A Superwoman (always spelled with a capital S) is sensibly selfish. She looks after herself and doesn't overwork. It took me years to acquire the discipline, control, and iron will that was necessary in order to stop doing things for other people and start doing things for myself."

"A SUPERWOMAN," Shirley Conran continues, "isn't a woman who can do anything, but a woman who avoids doing too much. She knows her own limitations and sticks happily within them; she realizes that life is untidy and so are the children in it."

There is more. "Superwoman does as little housework as possible." The secret for Superwoman is organization. "You have to be efficient if you're going to be lazy . . . I know of no job, whether it's running a factory or bathing a baby, that isn't easier, quicker, and more enjoyable if you think about it logically in advance — and that's all that efficient organization is."

There you have it. Superwoman organizes her kitchen, her husband and her kids so she can avoid "blood, sweat, toil and tears."

BEING organized has paid off for the author, Shirley Conran. Concurrently she runs her home, i.e. homes, in England, Canada and France and serves as editor of a widely read magazine for British women. In her spare time she is a well-known journalist and textile designer.

Over and over Ms. Conran reminds Superwomen that they live for themselves. "You may expend too much energy on the tennis court or the golf course, in the house, on the job, or in bed. That's between you and your glands and your doctor and mates and bosses, but essentially, it's your own affair because all that kind of energy belongs to you." Use it wisely.

The trick of saving your energy is to make the energy of the earth work for you, for your "comfort, mobility and survival." In your own interest, Conran argues, you use only as much gasoline, electricity, coal and wood as necessary. Thereby saving energy to work for you another day.

IN HER own interest Superwoman learns the art of phonemanship lest she become a slave to the telephone with its shrill, insistent call. In her own interest she encourages her friends and family membrs to make brief calls, and she makes them understand that she is not running an answering service.

Superwoman learns how to deal with reputable firms and craftsmen; how to read the guarantees and warranties and how to explain her problem to "the plumber, furnace repairman or appliance serviceman."

Superwoman learns to budget her money; to plan money matters with husband, to pool family income, to make tax returns, to get the family involved in planning expenditures. Superwoman learns how to control her habits so she does not become a cashaholic. Superwoman knows enough bookkeeping to keep her accounts straight and her family solvent.

SUPERWOMAN loves the simple life and by using a check list suggested by Ms. Conran becomes self-sufficient. Superwoman knows how to face realities; how to quit worrying about secondary matters; how to cease pining for freedom and how to obtain it instead.

Superwoman is not a paradox or a cartoon character; she is a well-organized, happy woman in a complex world.

"Superwoman" was published by Crown Publishers at $8.95 per copy.

Le Pacini

(Last of two parts on John Curtis, Giants' relief pitcher who was once a working sportswriter and who herewith continues his views of sports writing and related issues.)

QUESTION: What is the writer's roll in relationship to a professional team and to athletes — reporter or cheerleader, friend or adversary?

ANSWER: "We're in the entertainment business, so obviously the teams would like writers to be PR men. But, objectively, writers are the eyes and ears of the public, and should try to come as close to being objective as they can. I think that the worst thing a writer can do is to let editorializing seep into his reporting of a game. I think a writer should be free to let his judgment be exercised about how he reports a game without worrying about hurting somebody's feelings, so I think there should be a healthy distance between writers and athletes.

"To be able to be an objective critic, though, a writer should have the experience and knowledge which it takes to be accurate and objective. I found in Boston that the newspapers hired their sportswriters more for their writing ability than their knowledge of what they were covering.

Q: Should working baseball writers be paid official scorers?

A: "Official scoring is something I don't really concern myself with. They're like umpires. You let them get to you and you're lost. But I will say that there should be two of them — one sitting down each line. And I think umpires should be involved, consulted.

"I see nothing wrong with scorers asking players what happened on certain tough to call plays. It's all only in the interest of fair play, making an accurate judgment. It's hard, sitting way up there, to see everything in its proper perspective.

Q: Do you feel that the personal lives of athletes should be exposed to the public for any reasons? What do you think of Jim Bouton?

A: "Frankly, I think that the fan should be only concerned with the players' performance on the field. Because baseball is our profession, it's not essentially what we are, and that is really none of the fans' business.

"As far as Bouton is concerned, I honestly believe, to this day, that he wanted nothing more than to write a funny book about baseball. Jim has a tendency to look at things with a sense of humor.

"I think the problems with 'Ball Four' came because the book was 'written' by Jim as he spoke into a tape recorder. He sent the tapes to writer Leonard Schecter, who actually wrote it and who, I understand, had some tough times with Mantle and Ford and a few of the others who apparently were ripped by Bouton. If there was any poison to 'Ball Four,'' or what people took as poison, I believe the fault was with Schecter.

"They say that sports is the last place where people can look for heroes, and I think that many people resented Jim's giving us human views of 'immortals' being very human beings. To me, it was an enjoyable and humorous book . . . and very truthful and accurate.

Q: What are your pet gripes with sportswriters?

A: "The thing I hate most to see is the writer who comes down here (the locker room) who already has his story written. By that I mean he has in his mind a conception of how the game went and he's only looking for quotes to fill in empty spots and to substantiate what he's already conceived of as the story. You can tell what they're doing with their leading questions. Instead, for example, of asking what pitch a guy hit out of the park on you, he'll say, 'Wasn't that a fastball he hit?'

"I'm a stickler for accurate quoting. I know it's difficult in many situations to get a quote down verbatim, and in some cases verbatim quoting may make for dull reading. Maybe a player isn't articulate, or is more expressive in another language. But I think it's important for reporters to at least catch the spirit of the quote, if not the letter.

"Sometimes I see writers trading notes, and that's where they can really get into trouble. It becomes the old classroom game of orally passing a message around the room. After it makes the rounds, it's often nothing like what it started out to be.

Q: What do you plan to do about a career in writing?

A: "One thing I learned as a working newsman was that I probably could never be satisfied with it as a career. I realize that probably pretty near anything I go into after baseball is going to represent a pretty big dip in salary (Note: Curtis reportedly is earning $60,000), even though I'm not making that much in relation to a lot of players. But I don't think a working sportswriter's salary will do it for me.

"If I were to pursue writing after baseball, it would have to be some type of work that would support my wife and I in the style to which we've become accustomed; some way we could live comfortably though not necessarily luxuriously. So I don't envision pursuing writing full-blast. I would like to see myself as maybe a free lance journalist; contributing on my own schedule, doing only things I like to do.

"I do have a lingering ambition to write a novel about baseball, possibly about life riding the buses in the minor leagues and the psychological impact of it all on family life, and on the player himself.

"One of the best books ever written on baseball was Jim Brosnan's 'Long Season.' I don't think anyone other than Brosnan has come close to capturing the things I think are important about baseball.

"One thing I've discovered is that writing is really nothing more than talking to yourself. I've too often been on the intellectual level, trying to go beneath things instead of simply talking to myself. So that may be my new style, but I can't try it now because the big problem with my own writing at this stage is to find out how serious I am as a writer, and to do that I need time — and my free time must be spent concentrating on baseball, as any professional must. People don't realize that baseball isn't just the two or three hours it takes to play the game.

"I have a hard time following a schedule because I'm a very meticulous writer, and it's an excrutiating experience for me . . . sort of like coming in to face Pete Rose with the bases loaded and the game on the line."

HMB Harriers Win Opener

The Half Moon Bay High cross-country team, paced by the efforts of Mike Moulton and Ron Depp, defeated host Westmoor and Serramonte (which was incomplete) in the teams' North Peninsula League season-opening triangular meet Wednesday.

Moulton and Depp placed 2-3 for HMB as the Cougars beat Westmoor 24-31 on the Rams' 2.6-mile course. Serramonte's Dominic Rios came in first with a clocking of 14:04.

No freshman and (separate) girls competition was held; HMB's girls competed on the junior varsity level. Becky Schmidt of the Cougars finished second in the JV race with a time of 16:30.

In another NPL season-opening meet Wednesday, Oceana defeated host El Camino 25-32.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL HIGHLIGHTS

As they did with Oklahoma just two weeks ago, Texas once more hogs the national spotlight. However, this time they have to share it with THE Hogs, the undefeated Razorbacks of Arkansas. This will be the sixtieth meeting between the two Southwest Conference powers who have fought over the league title more than any other teams in the league. The Longhorns have dominated the series, winning exactly three-quarters of the games. And there's one peculiarity. During this long series, no game has ever ended in a tie. Texas breezed through three opponents before being squashed by Oklahoma, 31-10. And the last time the Razorbacks were impressive, in spite of being undefeated this season, was in the Orange Bowl, squashing the same Sooners, 31-6. Arkansas may be a sleeper as they were last year (they lost to the Longhorns in '77, 13-9), but we're picking Texas to win by seven points.

Michigan is no longer undefeated . . . however, Big Ten rival Wisconsin is. (Somewhere there has to be a comparison!) That's the best we can do . . . the rest is bad news. When the two met last fall, they were both undefeated through five games. What happened? Michigan buried the Badgers 56-0. The spread this year in favor of Michigan is 26 points.

We hit a wee jackpot two weeks ago when we forecast 51 winners out of 67 in major college games. The average through games of October 7th, .744 based on 762 right and 262 wrong.

Action in the Big Eight Conference centers on Nebraska-Colorado and Oklahoma-Iowa State. Colorado suffered its first defeat of the season last week, and the Buffs will be 23-point underdogs to the Cornhuskers. The Cyclones of Iowa State were hit by Nebraska and Missouri on back-to-back Saturdays, and now comes Oklahoma. The Sooners will win by nineteen.

In the Southeast Conference, Tennessee hosts Alabama, and in the Atlantic Coast Conference, Wake Forest challenges Maryland. And the Crimson Tide and the Terrapins will continue to roll . . . Alabama by 21 over the Vols and Maryland by 24 over the Deacons.

Jeff 'Character' Ends Drought

Not only did Jefferson High's football team defeat crosstown North Peninsula League rival Westmoor for the first time in 20 years Friday, but — perhaps more importantly — Indian Coach Jack Burgett thought Jeff's 24-23 victory over the host Rams taught his players a lesson about themselves.

"In the first quarter, we did okay," said Burgett. "Then, in the second quarter, we started playing giveaway. So at halftime I just told the kids, 'Look, we coaches have done all we can do. If you guys have the courage and desire, and if you WANT to win more than they do, you can do it.'"

Trailing 23-10 at halftime, the Indians didn't give Burgett much reason to holler thereafter, as they shut Westmoor out 14-0 in the second half.

"This was a great win for us after losing to them for 20 years," said Burgett. "I think our kids found out today that they have the courage and character — they FOUND OUT."

Among the heroes for Jeff were Richard Rodgers and Doug Cheatum. Rodgers rushed for 93 yards on eight carries and completed two of three passes, including the game-winner to sparkplug Cheatum, who picked up 88 yards on 20 hauls. Both also played well defensively, as did aggressive end Reginald Camp.

Midway through the third period, Rodgers turned the momentum Jeff's way when he took a pitchout from quarterback Nolan Smith in full stride and raced 58 yards down the right sideline for a touchdown. Steve McBee — who went 3-for-3 on his PAT kicks and also booted a 26-yard field goal — kicked his second extra point to make it 23-17.

Jeff's winning TD came on the second-to-last play of the third quarter — moments after Ram placekicker Dave Maxion (already with a 41-yard field goal to his credit) had come up just short on a 8-yard FG try.

On second down and 11 at the Westmoor 19, Smith gave the ball to Rodgers, who ran left on an apparent running play. But Rodgers stopped and lofted a wobbly pass to Cheatum, who was wide open near midfield. After making the catch in the center of the field, Cheatum broke a tackle, darted toward the right sideline and went 81 yards for a touchdown the Indians won't soon forget.

Charlie Banfield blocked Westmoor's one unsuccessful PAT kick.

A Makeshift Regent Line Holds Warriors

When a team loses four key players who compose both the offensive and defensive front lines right before a crucial league contest, it would be enough to send many a coach up the wall in hysteria.

Not Serramonte head coach Ken Cook.

After he learned that four of his two-way starters were suspended from school before the game against heavily-favored South San Francisco Friday night at Clifford Field, Cook came up with a dramatic makeshift defense that held the Warriors to one touchdown and preserved a 7-7 tie.

Serramonte is unbeaten in NPL play at 1-0-1. SSF is 0-1-1.

Most of the heroics were attributed to the Regent defensive backfield spearheaded by Daryll Williams, Kevin Smith and Ron Cranshaw.

Everywhere South City receivers went, this trio was quick to follow, and the Warriors completed only four out of 16 passing attempts.

"I just can't give these guys enough credit," said Cook. "They had a great burden on their shoulders with the absence of some of our key players, but I think they showed that they have great pride."

Serramonte's only score came when starting quarterback Allen Banks began a Regent drive on the SSF 40 with a 36-yard toss to Jeff Cooper, who was finally subdued at the four. Two plays later, Banks kept the ball himself and scampered around the left side for the game's first score.

The Warriors countered at the end of the first half, but only after a brilliant Regent defensive effort. With the ball on the Regent 46, South City quarterback Tom Esqueda pinpointed three consecutive aerials, only to have broken up the omnipresent Regent backfield. However, on fourth and 15, with less than a minute left in the half, he found Mike Brown for a 39-yard hookup. On the next play, Brown busted through a gaping hole for a seven-yard touchdown.

Banks, who ran for 42 yards and threw for 63, plunged into a cement-like scorer's table late in the second quarter and suffered bruised ribs. According to Cook, his loss (he was taken in for x-rays) could severely hinder the Regent offense.

"I don't think the injury will keep me out for long if at all. I'm just glad that we were able to pull this one through and hope that we can keep going," Banks said.

Rec Area Hearing Nov. 17

A public hearing on the preliminary General Development Plan for Candlestick Point State Recreation Area by the California State Park and Recreation Commission will be Nov. 17 at 10 a.m. at the Holiday Inn in South San Francisco.

The 175-acre area was designated Candlestick Point State Recreation Area by the commission in April, 1977. The recreation area is off Bayshore Freeway between Candlestick Park and the Bay, principally on land fill.

The proposed plan calls for a variety of recreation facilities, from picnic areas to nature education center, to be developed. Several picnic areas are proposed, including one for groups of handicapped persons. Docks are proposed for both powered and non-powered watercraft, and four fishing piers are proposed.

Other priorities in the plan include camping and day-use facilities, including a cultural program center and two group campgrounds. Hiking and bicycle trails also are proposed.

The plan also recommends that the California Department of Parks and Recreation work with public transportation agencies in the Bay Area to provide adequate transit facilities, including bus, rail, and possibly ferry service to Candlestick Point.

NPL Crown Next?

Tigers Keep Anchor

For the second consecutive season, the Anchor, symbolic of the football championship of Pacifica, will be housed in the Terra Nova High trophy case.

And if the Tigers play as effectively in the rest of their games as they did Friday in crushing cross-town rival Oceana High, 16-0, there may be another trophy looming in TN's future — a North Peninsula League title award.

Although it is too early in the season to concede the championship to any NPL team — TN coach Bob Lotti would be the first to admit that — the unbeaten Tigers figure to be a prime challenger for the conference crown.

"I don't think anybody is going to go undefeated in this league," Lotti predicted after his Tigers scored their second league win in as many games.

The Tigers, although plagued by penalties, dominated both lines of scrimmage against the Sharks. The defensive line, led by Mark O'Donnell, Mike Miller and Mark Eddy, helped limit Oceana to 61 yards rushing and made life miserable for quarterback John Brown.

Linebackers Sam Rigling and Mike Moser and defensive backs Mike Proulx and John Hinsch contributed to Brown's passing difficulties by placing superb coverage on his receivers giving the defensive line ample time to pressure the Oceana signal caller.

The Tiger offensive line, anchored by center Russ Smithers and tackles Bill Hammer and Scott Coppler, opened holes time and again for Terra Nova's backs, who collectively gained 287 yards.

Senior Marty Conolly, who scored the Tigers' two touchdowns on runs of 23 and 13 yards, led the ground-gainers with 82 yards in 11 carries. Dennis Sadlowski, the hero in last week's 9-6 win over South City, picked up 80 yards, including a 39-yard burst which set up his second-quarter 30 yard field goal.

For Oceana, now 0-2 in NPL play, thus far the season has been a nightmare. The Sharks, preseason picks to contend for the NPL crown, were set back by the Jefferson Union High School District teachers' strike, which cancelled their three pre-season contests, and the loss of a top-notch quarterback, who moved out of the district before the season began. Unlike Terra Nova, Oceana has not recovered from the strike's effects.

"As far as me and my players are concerned, we have completely ignored the strike. What's funny is that we are making more mistakes now than in our first game," Lotti commented.

Volleyball Roundup

Camino May End Drought

El Camino High, the North Peninsula League's preseason volleyball pick, lived up to its anticipated strength by downing Westmoor in straight games, 15-6 and 15-13, on the opening day of league play Wednesday.

In other NPL games, defending champion South San Francisco and Jefferson won straight game matches while Serramonte rallied to stop Oceana in three games.

El Camino is the first school in about 10 years given a chance to wrest the league volleyball crown from SSF, which has owned it for more than a decade.

The Colts are bolstered at the front line by 6-0 senior netblocker-spiker Jackie Determan. Setter Cheryl Shelmadine, the only junior in the otherwise all-senior starting lineup, is the floor leader, and runs EC's 4-2 offense.

Wednesday, veteran Debbie Rogers sparkled on offense with strong hitting to lead the Colts, who were a little shaky at the start of the match.

"Because of the Jefferson district teachers' strike we haven't had a chance to play any practice games," said coach Rhonda Walker, "so the girls might have been a little tight at the beginning, but they settled down quickly. They are an experienced group. I feel very confident about them."

At South City good things still come in small packages as 4-10 Karen O'Sullivan, the Warrior's rookie setter, was able to guide SSF to a 15-7, 15-8 win over Terra Nova.

Robin Petrini, the lone holdover from last year's championship team that went to the Central Coast Section playoffs, was the SSF catalyst on offense and defense, as she climbed the nets for stuffs and scrambled on defense.

Serramonte spotted Oceana a game but rallied behind Laurie Dominques' spikes and Yolanda Newton's blocking and serves to pull away for a 9-15, 15-3, 15-3 win.

Regent sophomore Karen Tamblin came through for the winners on the service line, a weak point for recent Serramonte squads.

Anchored by tall Melissa Firpo (5-8) and Faanape Tautalatasi (5-10), Jefferson controlled the game at net and took care of Half Moon Bay 15-6 and 15-8.

GPSL

Notre Dame High in Belmont made it two league wins in a row when they toppled visiting Castilleja of Palo Alto, 9-15, 15-5 and 15-7.

Setter Kim McAtee was a standout in the trenches, teaming with fellow frontliners for impenetrable double blocks. Sue Wallace, subbing for Kelly Kirkland, one of ND's top hitters, scored key points for the Tigers.

SM Strikes Early, Downs Crestmoor

It was a hot, hollow victory.

San Mateo High's football team beat host Crestmoor 27-10 Friday at Capuchino, but the Bearcats certainly know they didn't play well.

It was a 20-point first period, helped along by two costly Falcon fumbles, that did it for SM. The Bearcats are now 1-0-1 in Mid-Peninsula League play, but meet Aragon next, a better team than Crestmoor.

Crestmoor fumbled on its first offensive play, and Dave Mirabella fell on it for SM on the Falcon three. Bearcat quarterback Dave Stanton got the TD on a first-play sneak.

The Falcons fumbled again on their next series with Chris Lee falling on it for SM on the Crestmoor 19. Three plays later, Stanton was headed for the end zone, but fumbled the ball. Center Bob Phillips fell on in the end zone for SM's second score.

Crestmoor couldn't move, and punted to SM after the kickoff. On the second play, halfback Adam Haysbert took a pitchout from Stanton and rambled 59 yards to make it 20-0 with 4:28 left in the first period.

The rest of the game was a comedy of errors by both teams. SM fumbled the ball seven times and Crestmoor five in all. Each team suffered two interceptions.

The Falcons scored their only touchdown early in the second period when Stanton, back to pass, was blindsided and fumbled. Bob Montoya picked it up on the Bearcat one and scored. Bill Sans kicked the extra point.

Sans added a 36-yard field goal on the opening drive of the second half to get Crestmoor within 20-10.

The teams traded turnovers before SM's Jack Ratcliffe, seeing action for the first time in weeks after an injury, picked off a deflected aerial on Crestmoor's 31 midway through the fourth quarter. Stanton found wide-open George Bell with a 13-yard TD pass six plays later to make it 27-10.

Bearcat fullback Seta Pohahau was most of the SM offense, netting 148 hard-earned yards on 25 carries. Haysbert added 69 on six. Four quarterbacks combined for 99 yards passing for Crestmoor, now 0-2 in the MPL.

No Water Polo Chase Change

San Mateo High's water polo team is not about to make things easy for its pursuit, meaning Aragon.

Unbeaten San Mateo rallied to down Aragon earlier in the season and the Dons have been chasing after ever since, with scant hope, since the two teams are far away the class of the league.

While San Mateo (5-0) was defeating host Crestmoor 12-1 Wednesday, Aragon was staying within a game of the Bearcats when it was given credit for a win over host Capuchino by way of a forfeit.

In another MPL match Wednesday, Hillsdale gained sole possession of third place by posting a 5-3 victory over visiting Mills.

Ed Schmidt continued his fine play for San Mateo as he scored seven goals, matching his scoring effort in the Bearcats' 14-5 win over Mills 48 hours earlier.

Mills outscored Hillsdale 2-0 in the second period to earn a tie at halftime, but the Vikings couldn't overcome a three-goal performance by the Knights' Charles Young.

The circumstances surrounding Cap's loss via forfeit were somewhat unusual.

Cap coach Tom Olson couldn't get the door to the room containing all the equipment — including the clock — unlocked, and the official assigned to work the match left angrily.

Pads Bomb Mitty

SAN JOSE — After the big West Catholic Athletic League win Serra High's football team had registered over Bellarmine last week, a lot of people — including Padre head coach Nick Carboni — wondered whether Serra would have trouble getting up for its game against relatively weak Archbishop Mitty Friday night at Municipal Stadium.

Such worry was wasted, however, as Serra's diversified attack riddled the Monarch defense for 424 yards. The Padres roared to a 21-0 first-quarter lead and coasted to a 38-16 victory over Mitty.

"I was very worried about this one," said a relieved Carboni after Serra had lifted its WCAL record to 2-0 and its overal slate to 4-2. "After the win over Bellarmine, well, it's tough to get up like that two weeks in a row. And then we play S.I. (St. Ignatius) next week, and there was the possibility the kids might have been looking ahead to that, since they never have trouble getting up for S.I."

Carboni had more to worry about than possible overconfidence on the part of his troops; several of his players were bitten by the flu bug during the week, and it wasn't known until Thursday whether quarterback Bill Chalkley would be available for duty. It was thought that Chalkley might have appendicitis.

But Chalkley was able to play, and play he did. The 5-foot-11, 155-pound senior looked quite healthy as he completed seven of 14 passes for 90 yards.

Padre halfback Eric Redwood also enjoyed a memorable night; the 5-foot-7 junior gained 156 yards on 11 hauls. On Serra's first possession of the game, Redwood got the Pads rolling when he took a handoff from Chalkley and sped 80 yards on a brilliant run for the first of five Serra touchdowns.

Carboni said he was a bit disappointed in the Pads' defensive effort — "they were spreading us out on a lot of those pass plays and hitting on passes over the middle" — but Serra held Mitty to 247 yards in total offense.

HMB Refused To Play Patsy

That old 1977 magic almost returned to Half Moon Bay High Friday afternoon.

You remember the Half Moon Bay Cougars. They won the North Peninsula League title last year with a roster the size of a baseball team. They became known as the "Cardiac Kids", because of their penchant for winning those down-to-the-wire cliffhangers.

Well, it's 1978 now, and Half Moon Bay has yet to win a football game in four attempts. But the Cougars took a step in the right direction Friday by tying visiting El Camino 14-14.

El Camino probably took HMB for a patsy. One of those games to increase the ol' personal statistics while remaining unbeaten in the NPL race.

But the Cougars put together two impressive first-half touchdown drives, tallying in the first period on a 20-yard run by halfback Dave Gibbs (culminating a nine play, 67-yard march) and in the second quarter on a 14-yard scamper (after a nine play, 50-yard drive).

Camino QB Roger Ruzek found paydirt for the Colts on the first play of the second period as he faked a pitch on an option and then sped 50 yards for the score.

HMB — Gibbs 20 run (kick failed); EC — Ruzek 50 run (Pettigrew kick); HMB — Gibbs 14 run (Raleigh pass from Donovan); EC — Pettigrew 70 interception return (Ruzek kick).

A Dog's Flea Allergy

By D. R. BARNETT, DVM

QUESTION: We have an 8-year-old German Shepherd who has a patch on his back just in front of his tail that gives him trouble. He starts biting that area until all the hair is gone and the area raw. We have been told that it's a reaction to flea bites. If we keep the area shaved or short, he doesn't seem to have the problem. After the hair grows in, he starts gnawing himself again. Could this be caused by dry skin or dandruff? We bathe him about twice a year. Our friends have a female Shepherd that's plagued with this same problem. P.G.

ANSWER: The typical cause for scratching, chewing, and raw areas or "hot spots" on the back, tailbase, and down the rear legs is flea allergy. The animals develop a sensitivity to a protein in the flea's saliva, thereby causing an allergic reaction and severe itching everywhere the fleas bite. There are medications that help alleviate the itching caused by the allergy, but the main solution is to prevent flea infestation. The reason you're not seeing so much of a problem when you shave the affected areas is the fleas tend to stay in the more thickly haired areas. Bathing does not remove the immediate flea load and most flea shampoos do not provide any lasting protection. Bathing no more than once a month should not cause any skin drying or dandruff. Rigorous use of flea spray or powder will help prevent heavy flea infestation.

QUESTION: Our dog cries and howls when we are away for a weekend or on a long vacation. He never does it when we are home. Our neighbors have had enough. I've heard there is something like a shock treatment that can be given him everytime he cries to modify his behavior. Is there such a treatment and would it hurt him?

ANSWER: What you are describing sounds like a conventional "shock collar," which operates on the principle that when the dog barks, the vibration triggers a mechanism in the collar which then delivers a mild shock to the dog. I do not recommend these collars, as they often malfunction and the shock delivered can be stronger than intended and leave a burn. Also, different vibration ranges may not produce a shock everytime the dog barks. The best method is permanent conditioning or behavior modification. There are several excellent behaviorists in the area who can help owners modify their dog's behavior. The methods involve a lot of time and patience on the owner's part in working with the animal, but the results are well worth it.

The Gamesman: Old Game Refound

By RICHARD C. MOON

Many people are fascinated by ancient games. Those aged gaming boards and the intricately-carved pieces stir a deep-seated curiosity within many of us, particularly since the rules of play are usually a mystery. We wonder what pleasures our forefathers found in their games, how they came to be invented and what part these games played in the fabric of their society.

About such ancient games as chess, mah-jong and backgammon, we know a good deal. But about others we know almost nothing and can only speculate as to how they were played. Because any game lover knows how difficult it is to learn about the rules and origins of most ancient board games, we can appreciate all the more a game published by Leisure Learning called Seejah.

The people at Leisure Learning tell us that this game had its beginning at Har Megiddo, the Armageddon of the Bible. The gaming board that was discovered there consisted of a broken grindstone incised roughly with a grid.

It appears that its discoverer set out to find how this newly unearthed game might have been played. After a long search, a Bedouin tribe was located in a tent encampment. They were playing a game thought to be closely linked to the one found at Megiddo. The game was called Seejah.

Seejah is played on a board of 49 squares, 7 squares to a side. The center square is marked with an "X" which indicates its role as the starting square. There are 48 playing pieces divided into 24 "Tels", which recall the squared-off hillsmarking archaeological sites in the Biblical world, and the 24 "Jugs", modeled after the clay vessels used in ancient times to store oil, water and wine.

Seejah is a war game and may originally have been played by soldiers from Rome who occupied Jerusalem and surrounding areas. The object is to capture or immobilize so many of the opponent's pieces that he becomes powerless and no longer can retaliate.

This game of strategy is designed for two players and, as with chess, the rules are simple enough to be learned by a seven-year-old. Yet total mastery of Seejah requires precision, skill and cunning.

Seejah is a very stimulating game and anyone who enjoys chess, Go or the strategy games is likely to find it quite entertaining.

To recapture the atmosphere of the original game, the board is a full-color reproduction of the original game grid which was etched in Judean limestone. When playing Seejah it is easy to have the feeling that you are re-living a part of history that would have been lost to us forever, had it not been for the curiosity and tenacity of a modern-day game lover.

Human Services To Meet

A public comment session has been scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Thursday by the San Mateo County Human Services Coordinating Council and the Child Care Coordinating Council at the Health and Welfare Building, 225 W. 37th Ave., San Mateo.

HSCC Chairman David Rowe, the city manager of Daly City, said that since June 1978 a Child Care committee made up of representatives from public and private agencies, together with public members, has been studying the major issues of child care.

Views expressed at the meeting will be incorporated into a series of recommendations to be presented to local and state legislators for action, Rowe said.

Both councils hope to serve as a coordinating force to get people together on child care issues and to eventually affect the funding picture in the field.

S.S.F. Redevelopment Hearing

The South San Francisco City Council will meet tonight to discuss again the future of community development.

City Planner Bill Costanzo will report to the council on how a redevelopment agency could be set up to pay for some of the improvements in the industrial area near the Bayshore Freeway.

Also on the agenda is a discussion of the library budget, which has been proposed to be cut by 10 percent.

Dr. Robert Alvarez, director of the two South San Francisco libraries, said the cut for the first year would amount to about $36,600 for a nine-month period but would be more the following year.

The largest cut would be in the area of salaries for part-time employees — a $15,000 cut.

Alvarez said no full-time employee hours have been cut but hours of part-time employees would be cut by an average of 20 percent.

Another budget item that would be affected is the one for acquistion of books and periodicals. The proposal is that $12,220 be cut there.

Another cost-saving measure is reduction of hours the libraries would be open.

As of the first of this month, Alvarez said, library hours have been cut as part of the budget reductions.

West Orange Library will be open from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturdays, a two-hour cut in hours. On Sundays it will be open from 1 to 4:30 p.m., a half-hour cut.

At the Grand Avenue Library, Saturday hours also have been cut by two hours. Hours of operation are from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The City Council will meet at 7 p.m. in the City Hall conference room for an adjourned meeting. The study session on community development will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Author Speaks to 'Friends'

Dorothy Bryant, a native San Franciscan who taught in Bay Area schools and colleges for over 20 years, now an author and publisher, will discuss her new novel, "Miss Guardino," for The Friends of the Daly City Library and guests, Oct. 26 at 10 a.m. in the community room of the Westlake Library, 275 Southgate Ave.

The meeting is free and open to the public.

The novel, "Miss Guardino," has San Francisco's Mission District as its setting and recounts the story of a child of Italian immigrants who overcame poverty and prejudice and taught in a San Francisco high school for 40 years. The author says, "The book is fiction, but it contains some of my own family history, some of the history of San Francisco, some of my teaching experience, and some of my memories of several dedicated teachers who inspired me."

The author now writes and lives in Berkeley, with her husband, Robert Bryant, with whom she has founded a new publishing house, Ata Books. Bryant's earlier published works include "Ella Price's Journal," and "The Kin of Ata Are Waiting For You."

Reservations will be accepted at the review for the no-host luncheon honoring the author, to follow the event at Bianchini's Restaurant in Skyline Plaza.

San Bruno's Traffic Topic On Thursday

Members of the Citizens Action League will meet with the chairman of San Bruno's Traffic Safety Committee Thursday night to discuss traffic problems in San Bruno.

The meeting, according to CAL spokeswoman Edna Gentry, will begin at 7:15 p.m. in the auditorium of Belle Air School.

Meeting with the CAL representatives will be William "Chick" Torlucci, Traffic Safety Committee chairman.

Mrs. Gentry said the main topic of discussion will be traffic problems on the avenues. She said CAL hopes to have more stop signs installed on the avenues, which make up the east side of San Bruno.

JESD ESAA Plan

Computers and home tutorials will figure in the Jefferson Elementary School District's curriculum this year, trustees learned Wednesday evening at a board meeting held at the district office in Daly City.

They also thrashed out objectives for the district's bilingual master plan, funding for field trips and heard a legal opinion on the requirements of educating illegal aliens.

Ron Fortune, Emergency School Aid Act (ESAA) director for the district, announced that the district has received a $392,000 federal grant to pay for 32 computer terminals that will allow about 500 students in reading and math as well as after-school tutorial assistance at 10 sites and a "High Potential Program" for approximately 200 gifted students in the fourth-through eighth-grades.

The ESSA provides funds to aid children in overcoming educational disadvantages caused by minority group isolation. The federal money is awarded to school districts by the state.

Fortune also reported on the success of the district's 1977-78 ESAA program, noting that the $428,303 that the district spent helped 300 low-achieving students catch up with their peers. Standardized tests given to the students after seven months showed that they gained an average of 1.3 years in reading, .8 years in math and 1.1 years in language arts.

Fortune said results were less spectacular among two non-English speaking classes. In fact, he said, the sixth-graders in the Chinese-Japanese class dropped .2 of a year in a test administered after the first seven months of the ESAA program.

"We were very honest with our statistics," he remarked.

"How could they go backwards?" asked Trustee Beverly Forrester.

Board President Dorothy Adams suggested that the students probably had "declining interest in taking tests."

An attempt by the trustees to rephrase some of the district's goals for its bilingual master plan provoked some angry words from individuals who sat on an advisory committee charged with drafting objectives for the program.

At Assistant Superintendent Larry Lyon's suggestion, the board decided not to adopt a goal of giving preference to bilingual teachers in its general hiring practices. Mrs. Forrester said to do so would invite lawsuits from non-minority applicants.

The board agreed that an additional goal should be to set up in-service activities that would help participants in the program improve in their ability to speak English.

One committee member, Virginia Duggan, objected that the board could not arbitrarily change the committee's goals. After much discussion, the trustees finally voted to accept the advisory committee's recommendations verbatim and to adopt separately their own goals.

Board members squabbled with one another over a budget for field trips that Lyon outlined. The $15,440 budget is approximately one-third lower than last year's.

Trustee Alvin Schwarzbach pointed out that the proposed budget would allocate several thousand more dollars for fifth-through-eighth-grade field trips than for the primary grades. As an alternative, he suggested giving each school the same amount of money for field trips and letting the individual schools decide how to spend it.

In the final vote, Lyon's recommended field trip budget passed 3-2. Schwarzbach and Mrs. Forrester cast the "no" votes.

Lyon reported to the trustees that state Superintendent of Schools Wilson Riles had replied to their request for a legal ruling on the admission of illegal aliens to school.

Lyon said that Riles wrote, "No distinction can be made between legal and illegal aliens" and that the district "may, but is not legally required to enroll illegal aliens."

Trustee James Cranna noted that it is to the district's advantage to enroll them, since the district qualifies for average daily attendance dollars from the state for legal as well as illegal aliens.

Cranna objected to a blanket policy of admitting illegal aliens, saying, "I'm not restricting the children from an education. My point is that, coming in from a foreign country, you can bring all sorts of weird diseases."

Major Daly City Project Goes Ahead

Daly City's City Council delayed action on two major projects proposed last Tuesday night and reluctantly approved a use permit for a third.

The proposal that got a green light from the council will combine 16 apartments and commercial space at the southwest corner of the intersection of School Street and Bruno Avenue.

The Planning Commission previously had voted to permit the project with nine conditions, including the planting of trees on the street, the installation of water-saving devices and the routing of water runoff beneath sidewalks.

During a prior discussion of the proposal, Mayor William Schumacher had voiced dissatisfaction with the increased traffic that the building would create.

Schumacher and Councilman James Tucker were outvoted 3-2 on the matter.

Schumacher remarked to the applicant, Charles Dennis, "You got your project and we got your traffic, and we hope we live happily ever after."

The council postponed action for two weeks on a zone change requested by Damavandi Enterprises, Inc., that would allow the company to build 210 townhouse-style condominiums between Interstate 280 and Hampshire Avenue, north of Verducci Drive.

The Planning Commission placed 15 conditions on that project when it agreed to the zone change.

Fred Damavandi explained that his company decreased the number of townhouses, added more space between them and improved access for emergency vehicles in response to suggestions by the Serramonte Homeowner Association and the Planning Commission.

He said the two- and three-bedroom units would sell for between $85,000 and $125,000.

Council members raised concerns about the appearance of the project from nearby neighborhoods, possible erosion problems due to the steep slope on which it is to be built and traffic that the project would generate.

During a public hearing on the project, Roseanne Emerson of the Serramonte Homeowners asked the council to consider the noise and traffic hazards she said the project would create.

Ernest Pezzola said he didn't think the townhouses could be adequately reached by emergency vehicles.

At Councilman Albert Teglia's suggestion, the council voted unanimously to continue the public hearing on the project until Oct. 23.

The council also delayed action on a use permit sought by Dick Price of Le Jo, Inc., for a commercial multiple-family dwelling on Sullivan Avenue, between Eastmoor Avenue and Pierce Street.

Noting that the Planning Commission had denied the use permit because of an awkward entrance and exit to the project, Councilman Anthony Giammona suggested sending the matter back to the city's planning staff for other access suggestions.

Councilman Albert Teglia agreed. "I'm ready to support this if the ingress and egress could be cleared up because I would like that whole corner to be fixed up," he said.

In other business, the council approved off-street parking standards requiring Mary's Help Hospital to add 153 parking spaces by the time the hospital's expansion program is finished. The hospital has agreed to do so.

The council routinely denied several claims, including one amounting to $43,500 made by Ramona Birke, who said her city directory business plummeted when the Greater Daly City Chamber of Commerce endorsed a competing directory.

In any event, these prices may vary in different trading areas depending on shipping and other costs and circumstances which might affect such a price. No representation is made to the effect that any of these prices is the usual or ordinary price at which a particular item is sold.

No user of this catalog should assume that a savings will be effected or realized in an amount equal to the difference between the figure in the right-hand column and the Consumers Distributing price. In some cases, other retailers may be selling goods at prices equal to or less than Consumers Distributing price for the purpose of clearing goods which are end-of-line or stale merchandise, or by reason of their ordinary business practices.
